Archibald Mitchell attended the pi-ano recital given by Prof. F. L. Far-rell at Ansonia on Thursday evening of last week and, in comparison with the two previous ones which were giv-en here, declares this was by far the best. The audience was a musical one and displayed its appreciation by many recalls. Professor Farrell has best. The audience was a many one and displayed its appreciation by many recalls. Professor Farrell has the right makeup for a great player and his work thus far brands him a very fine artist, says Mr. Mitchell. He has excellent technique and plays with fine expression. Besides Mr. Mitchell. Dr. J. J. Donohue and Thomas Connor were in attendance.

The Ansonia Sentinel of Friday evening has the following regarding the concert:

To the large number of music lovers

To the service affection, because they are the greatest of suffering which attiends we motherhood is the smallest part of her pain. Who can portray the keen anx-lety mothers feel for the sefety and welfare of their children. No words can suitably describe the anguish of soul and agony of heart mothers experience when their children go astray—when they run off into sin and ruin-

To the large number of music lovers who gathered in the City hall anditorium, last night, the piano recital of Mr. Frank Farrell was both surprising and satisfying. It seemed the common opinion that he is a true virtuoso and that he has made a piace for him. and that he has made a place for him-self among the leading planists of the day. His style is brilliant, his technique artistic, and his execution particularly easy. The difficult passages were mastered with seeming ease and all in all the recital was most artistic and pleasing.

Mr. Farrell's programme included the following. Andante with variations,

Sonata op. 31, No. 8, Allegro Minuetto

Minuero Vivace Nocturne, op. 48, No. 1, Stude, op. 19, No. 7, Polonaise, op. 53, Polonaise, op. 53, Polonaise, op. 53, Staccato Etude C major

Miss Lucy Geer, the leader, conducted the service, which opened with the singing of the hymn, Daughters of Rhapsodie, No. 12, Of the entire programme, three the King, followed by the responsive numbers were particularly engaging. Bible service for The King's Daughhopin's "Etude," Rubinstein's cato Etude C Major" and Liszt's John iv:7 and prayer. Following a well "Rhapsodie." Being widely different in character, these numbers particularly well displayed the artist's talent, givwell displayed the artist's talent, giv-ing him an opportunity to exhibit his musical temperament and exquisite delicacy of touch and expression. His psalm. Miss Ellen Geer read the pro-delicacy of touch and expression. His climaxes were powerful and his runs particularly distinct. A noticeable feature of his playing was that the air and theme were at all times distinct, whether carried in the bass or treble.

Scriabine's "Nocturne" for the left hand only, was exhibitive and effective, and received probably more applause than any number on the programme. Each number, however, was generous. Each number, however, was generous. The second of the governor of Connecticute, and the plane solo, Fraternal March, was given by Miss Neille Howie.

Mrs. Isaac S. Jones read Wide Observance of Mother's Day, and Miss Neille W. Geer read Home and Mother. Miss Cardner, followed by these readings: Power of a Word Miss Eartlett; Nobody Knows but Mother, ly and enthusiastically received, and ly and enthusiastically received, and doubtless all present would again welcome an opportunity of hearing Mr. Farrell, Being an Ansonia boy, he was personally known to many of his audience, who after the recital took occasion to congratulate him and representations. Bartlett, Nobody Knows out Mother, Miss Gardner; A Child's Question, Mrs. Hammett; Christian Mothers, Miss Adams; The True Mother, Mrs. Abell. The service closed with the sunging of the hymn of the order, Lead as We Go.

During the services Miss Geer announced that the plane used for the new old friendship.

Music is Joe's forte and before the evening was over he had delighted the crowd with the several instruments he played. His double-jointed cornet was a novelty and he coaxed more music out of the bass drum than was ever supposed to lurk in between the sheepskins. There was another kind of music that pleased Captain Douglass when the crowd was invited to throw their offerings onto the big drumhead. Joe the Turk, who has been imprisoned 52 times for speaking on the streets, told something of his experience, and then played the saxophone in an efficient manner. He announced that he would give a concert Monday evening in the headquarters for the benefit of the local corps, playing several different kinds of instruments, and unveiling his electrical umbrelia.
